

I'm in love with this new generation of boutique hotels in UAE, and the Millennium Place Mirdif is a perfect example - professional, easy to deal with, affordable, personalized service and precise attention to details, and especially it feels cozy like your own home.

It's a perfect staycation destination in Dubai.

You see, the size of the property is not directly related to guest satisfaction - in that it's not true the larger the property, the better the stay.

In fact, larger properties tend to struggle to provide care for your specific needs.

And on the luxury front, the new generation of boutique hotels can be even more elegant than their more established counterparts.

The Millennium rooms are ultra-modern, equipped with the latest amenities and conveniences - and the separation into living room and bedroom spaces is very cleverly designed.

So on the one side, daytime relaxation and conversation is possible, while on the other side of the pillar - TV screen on both sides! - is the night-time area.

And within what is probably a normal room size in terms of floor space, the actual living spaces created are excellent.

Much better interior design than the traditional, old-fashioned square room with a few chairs placed directly opposite the bed.

And then the Millennium Place Mirdif adds even a balcony!

Beyond your room, the elegant and intelligent design continues in the hotel's common areas.

Where functional spaces are both inviting and comfortable.

Additionally, guest services and amenities are well-developed, such as the use of terraces,

several restaurants,

with option of private dining rooms,

a fully-stocked bar,

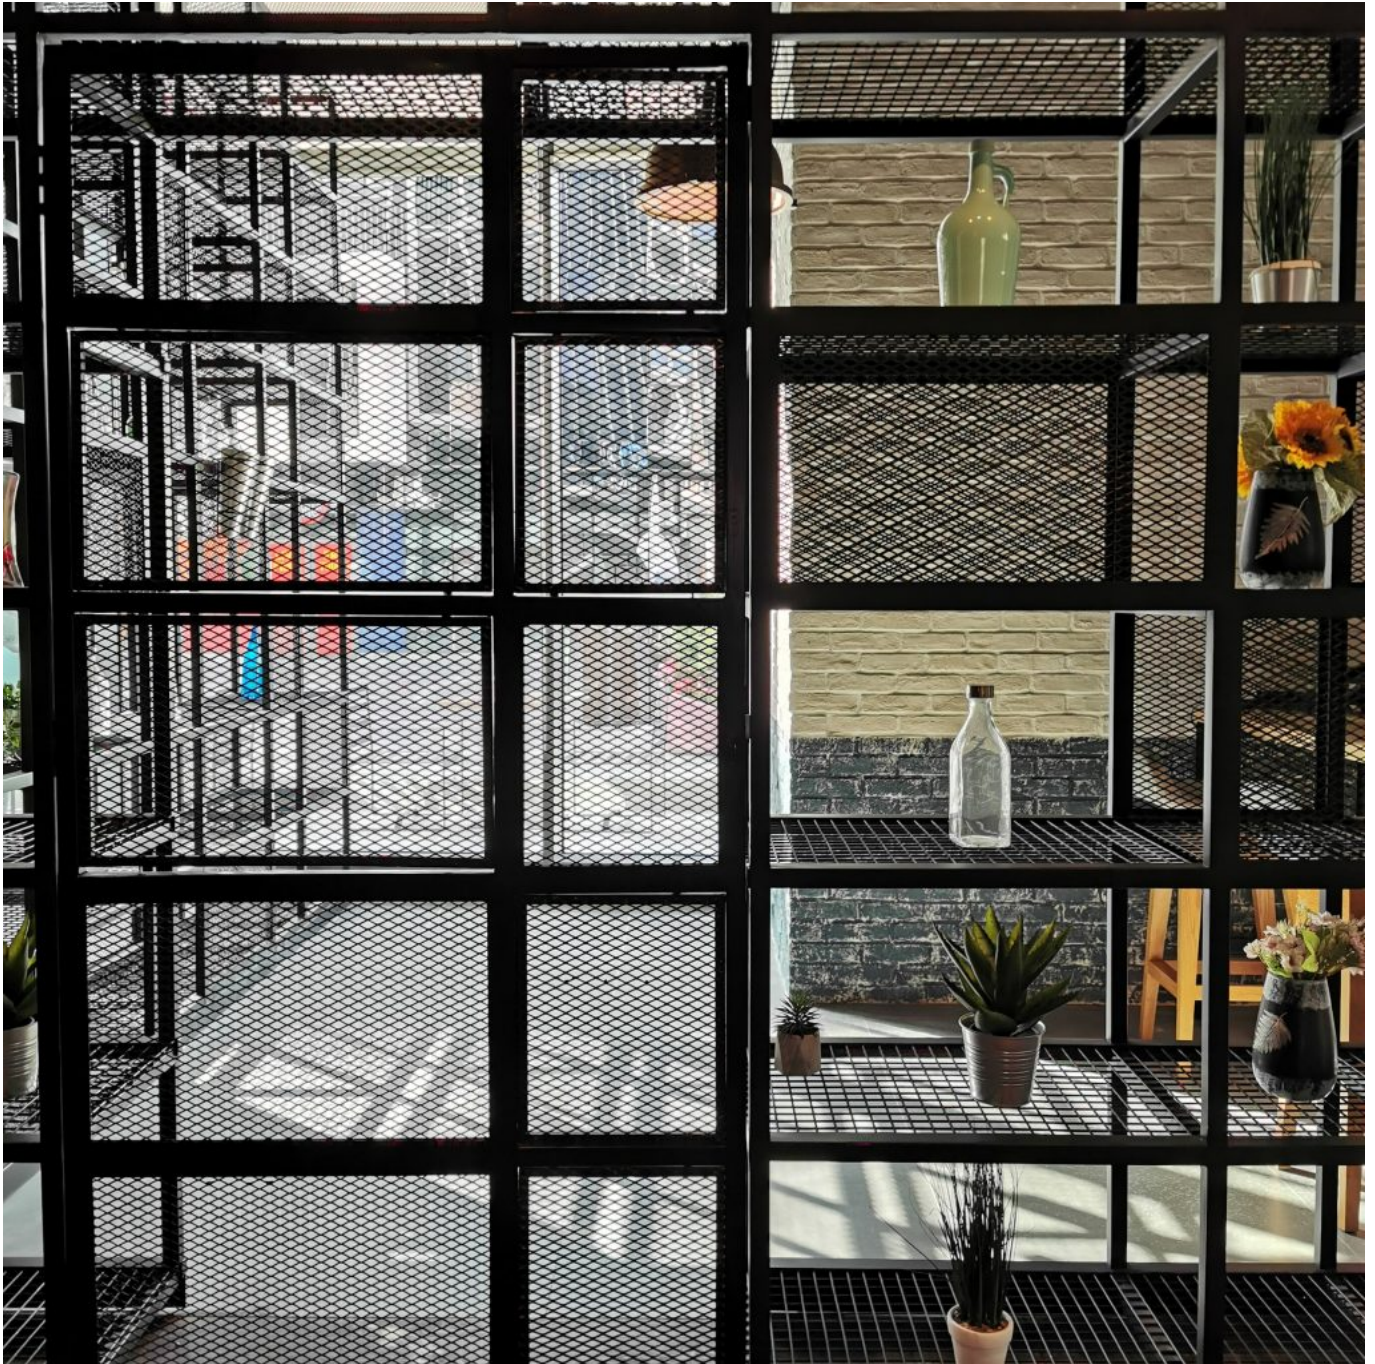

a roof-top infinity pool,

and, incredibly, even a cigar lounge!

I really don't know what more one could wish for!

And as the soft-opening irons out any wrinkles, and the municipality catches up with road construction on the park side, Millennium Place Mirdif is very well poised to offer amazing value staycations in Dubai.

Definitely a hotel to keep an eye on.
